

When in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to separate from another, and to assume among the powers of the earth, the separate and equal station to which the laws of nature and of nature's God entitle them; a decent respect to the opinions of [human]kind requires that

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty, and the pursuit of Happiness. That to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed. Whenever any form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness.

Declaration of Independence

...the political power which is connected with
...to which the Laws of Nature and of Nature's God
...shall declare the causes which are to be separated
...equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with
...the pursuit of Happiness - that to secure this ...consent of the governed, - That whenever any form of ...people fail to or obstruct it, and to maintain that Government
...as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and

